HOMEBATCH

Brand Identity & Digital Design Brief

1. Brand Overview

HomeBatch is a Lagos-based home-cooked food convenience service designed for busy households.

The idea is simple: many people want to eat home-cooked food but do not always have the time or energy to shop, prep, cook and clean every week.

HomeBatch allows customers to plan and order their weekly soups, stews, proteins and other home-style food in advance and have them delivered to their homes during scheduled weekend delivery windows.

HomeBatch is not another on-demand food delivery platform. The focus is weekly household food replenishment, rather than individual meals.

The shift we are creating

Traditional food delivery asks:

“What do you want to eat now?”

HomeBatch asks:

“What does your household need for the week?”

2. Brand Promise

Your weekly cooking, handled.

The brand should communicate convenience, reliability, quality and the comfort of having good food already sorted at home.

3. Target Audience

Our primary audience is:

- Busy Lagos professionals

- Working couples
- Young families
- Busy parents
- Households with disposable income
- People who enjoy home-cooked food but struggle with the time and energy required to prepare it

They are not necessarily people who dislike cooking. They simply have busy lives and would rather spend their limited free time doing other things.

4. Brand Personality

HomeBatch should feel:

Warm
Modern
Reliable
Convenient
Premium but accessible
Nigerian
Friendly and familiar

The brand should feel like a smart lifestyle solution rather than a traditional catering business.

It should have personality without becoming overly playful or childish.

5. Visual Direction

We would like the design team to explore a visual identity that communicates:

- Home and comfort
- Food and freshness
- Convenience
- Trust and reliability
- Modern Nigerian living
- Premium everyday living

We are open to exploring different colour directions, typography and graphic styles.

The identity should work equally well across digital platforms and physical touchpoints.

Please avoid making the brand look too much like:

- A typical restaurant
- A food delivery app

- A catering company
- A grocery supermarket
- An overly corporate food brand

The visual identity should make HomeBatch feel like a category of its own.

6. Required Brand Deliverables

Brand Identity

- Logo
- Logo variations
- Icon/brand mark
- Colour palette
- Typography
- Graphic elements/patterns
- Iconography direction
- Brand usage guidelines
- Basic brand style guide

Digital Assets

- Landing page design
- Mobile responsive landing page
- Social media profile image
- Social media templates
- Instagram post/carousel template
- Instagram Story template
- Promotional campaign template
- WhatsApp promotional template

Customer Touchpoints

- Food packaging/sticker direction
- Delivery packaging
- Thank-you/customer card
- Order/invoice template
- Subscription/package cards
- Possible delivery bag or box branding

7. Landing Page Direction

The landing page should quickly communicate:

What HomeBatch is → Who it is for → How it works → What customers can order → Why they should trust us → How to get started.

Possible sections:

1. Hero section
2. The problem
3. How HomeBatch works
4. Food categories
5. Subscription/package options
6. Why HomeBatch
7. How our kitchen partners are selected
8. Customer testimonials
9. FAQs
10. Call to action

The landing page should feel simple, clean and conversion-focused rather than overloaded with information.

8. Brand Experience

A key part of the project is creating consistency across the entire customer journey.

From seeing a HomeBatch social media post, to visiting the website, placing an order, receiving their food and opening the package, the experience should feel like the same brand.

The design should therefore be scalable across:

Social → Website → Ordering → Packaging → Delivery → Customer communication

9. Creative Thought

One of the strongest ideas behind HomeBatch is:

“You don't necessarily hate cooking. You hate everything that comes before eating.”

HomeBatch takes care of the repetitive work that comes with keeping food at home.

The brand should therefore sell time, convenience and peace of mind, not just food.

Key brand thought:

HomeBatch
Your weekly cooking, handled.

10. What We Need From the Design Team

We would like the team to develop a visual identity that gives HomeBatch a strong and recognisable presence from the beginning.

The goal is to create a brand that can start with soups, stews and proteins but eventually grow into a broader home food and household convenience brand without needing a complete rebrand.

The identity should be memorable, flexible, commercially practical and distinctive enough to stand out within Lagos' growing food and convenience market.
